in, I have the sausages really eaten. Behold you, it is all only imagination on the word.

There are, says the American Magazine,

20,227 locomotives of all kinds belonging to the railroads of North America, according to the most reliable official figures.

Reckoning the life of a locomotive at twenty-five years, it ought to require the construction of 1169 locomotives annually to maintain the life of engines in great numbers. Locomotives on the roads, power last are doubled out of service; but, making all free allowances for this, the figures indicate that in the last year the removals of locomotives have been far below the necessary requirements.

Many of the engines built represent mantenance of stock, but are called for by now roads and steamship companies.

You state you still have little girl?" he asked as he sat down beside her. "Oh, no, sir." "But you can learn," I said.

I could, but I don't want to." "And you come here just to watch the skaters?"

"Oh, no; I come to watch Mrs. R.—Who's she?"

"She's your parents' second wife. She will do well to come here."

"Well, I wanted him to promise that she wouldn't lean on him when she was skating; when she was resting; but she wouldn't promise, and so I came to watch her. The short marks are when she skates, and these long ones when she skates."

"Yes, and he did the same thing you were doing, and by his help have enough to get a divorce on and marry somebody else.
